A lifelong member of the Durham community, Rebekah Polster's roots in town date back to the 1970s. After returning full-time in 2022, she is eager to serve and contribute to Durham's future.

A graduate of Wheaton College, Rebekah has built a career in public relations, marketing, event planning, and account management—experience that equips her to navigate the town's evolving needs. She is committed to fostering a thriving, welcoming community through collaborative decision-making and open dialogue with residents.

In her spare time, Rebekah enjoys hiking with her husband, Tim, and their dog, Ghost—sometimes joined by their son, Ben—or reading with her cat, Polly, curled up on her lap.
